

ANNOUNCER: You've tuned in to another edition of The Break Room, a weekly conversation about how the City of St Augustine works from those who do the work everyday. Hosted by the City of St Augustine's Communications Director Melissa

Wissel. The Break Room offers a closer look at the different

City departments and provides updates on current and upcoming projects and events. And now your host, Melissa Wissel.

MELISSA: Thanks for tuning in. You're listening to The Break Room. I'm

Melissa Wissel, Communications Director for the City of St Augustine. If you follow the City on social media, you've seen our Faces of the Places campaign as part of Women's History Month, highlighting not only the rich history we here in the Nation's Oldest City, but also the women behind that history. So joining me in studio this week, I've invited our City Clerk Darlene Galambos back to help me recap the who and the where behind the Faces of the Places for Women's History Month. Darlene, welcome back. DARLENE: I'm happy to be back. MELISSA: We've got a lot of places to cover. You were with us for the recap of our

Black History Month Faces of the Places, so let's jump right in. Our first one we're going to talk about is Gibbs Park. DARLENE: Gibbs Park is a little park at the foot of the Lions Bridge. It was dedicated in 1986 to Clarissa Anderson Gibbs. Her family's association goes pretty far back, in the mid 1800's with the City.

People might recognize Dr.

Andrew Anderson's name. She spent her life doing a multitude of things for the community ,carrying on her father's legacy with his medical background, with Flagler Hospital, supporting the community with children's activities. She was the former president of the Women's Exchange, which is, they are housed in the Pena Peck House. And she also oversaw the restoration and refurbishing of the Markland House, which was the, at one time the home of her father, Dr. Anderson. A significant thing about her family's history is her connection, obviously to her father. But he was responsible for commissioning two very prominent figures in our community that most people know.

And that's the Medici Lions that sit on either side of the the Bridge. MELISSA: Bridge of Lions.

DARLENE: The Bridge of Lions. MELISSA: So she's pretty significant and like you said, that's that little park down there by the Marina. I never knew it had a name. I just always called it the park by the Marina. DARLENE: The little green space right? Oh yes it has a name for a wonderful woman. MELISSA: Wonderful. Moving on to our next woman that we were highlighting is Lucy Abbott, and of course that would be Abbott Tract. Yes, that's the neighborhood just north of Ripley's Museum. Lucy Abbott moved here in 1860. And when she moved here, she was in her 20s, so she's quite young. But she was clearly an entrepreneur and started buying property in the Abbott Tract and constructing homes. Nine of those structures still stand today, and they date from anywhere from 1861 to 1894. So, clearly she didn't waste any time. MELISSA: And she, so she started the short-term rentals.

We can trace that back to the 1890s. Okay. 1860s. Okay.

DARLENE: So the the Abbott Tract is on our National Register of Historic Places and still contains 124

historic buildings. MELISSA: Oh wow. DARLENE: A little fun thing about her. She was the organist at the St

Augustine Episcopal Church during her lifetime for about 15 years. MELISSA: Okay. We're going to talk another geographic place, a park and that's Davenport Park.

DARLENE: Davenport Park is a little special to me, just because of how we acquired it. Naomi Davenport, the daughter of George Davenport from Davenport, Iowa, moved down here for health reasons for her father. And he just absolutely fell in love with St Augustine and wanted to do more. Well, she kept his word for the City and left an endowment to create a park in his name. And that park is right by the public library, next to the Waterworks Building still you know a community park today.

MELISSA: We used to have the carousel. DARLENE: It used to have the carousel. No no, that's moved to a new home.

However. MELISSA: Maybe we'll get one back, I don't know. DARLENE: Never know, never know. There is still historic piece of that, the little stem wall that borders the park was from the former

St, San Marco Hotel. MELISSA: Original San Marco Hotel. DARLENE: Original San Marco Hotel. MELISSA: Which is now where the new.... DARLENE: The VIC.

MELISSA: Next to the VIC parking garage.

DARLENE: The new structure that was built. Yeah. So that was that was quite a quite a building.

MELISSA: Right. In the original days.

Yeah. So the the little ballers that you see around that park come from the original San Marco Hotel. DARLENE: Yes. MELISSA: Very cool. DARLENE: A way to repurpose. MELISSA: And there is a playground? Is that a, no. The thing that spins around? Seesaws. Teeter totters. Swings. Slides I don't know. DARLENE: You can take your children out there and play and have fun, wonderful time. MELISSA: It's been a while.

Mine's 21. It's been a while since I've been there. DARLENE: In the shade of the oak trees.

It's a wonderful time. MELISSA: Very nice. And that is right next door to, like you said, the library and the Waterworks Building. The, you are now listening to The Break Room.

I'm Melissa Wissel,

Communications Director for the City of St Augustine. I have Darlene Galambos in studio this week. She is our City Clerk.

We're talking about the Faces of the Places campaign that we did on social media as part of Women's History Month. We did a similar series for Black History Month.

Circling back to our places that we were talking about, we were just talking about two physical place, two parks. Let's switch gears Darlene and talk a little bit about a couple of building spaces that we have that are named after our Women's History. Dr Sue

Middleton Archaeology Center.

DARLENE: Yeah, that building is located right now 30 Pellicer Lane, right next to our fleet maintenance building. Dr Middleton was a pioneer in many ways.

She was a scientist, a community activist, a local psychologist, beautiful woman.

If you don't know this, she passed along her love of historic preservation onto her daughter, who was our current Mayor, Miss Nancy Sikes-Kline.

When she passed away in her will, she donated her home to continue supporting the City's Archaeology Program. And so what started with our current building will be expanded in the near future.

And to house... MELISSA: So we'll be able, we're basically going to sell her home and use the proceeds.

To build a new facility or center. DARLENE: Fortify our history.

And still in the works.

MELISSA: So stand by for what happens next, but that is exciting. DARLENE: It is very exciting. She really wanted to provide a dedicated space to our archaeologist, who could search for evidence of our past and preserve it.

She was a deep believer in the importance of our past, obviously. And that the evidence is right here beneath our feet.

MELISSA: Archaeology, digging all the time. I love the fact that we have an archaeology program.

I dig it. DARLENE: You dig it? I dig it.

MELISSA: I dig it too. Okay. So that's the middle, Dr Sue A Middleton Archaeology Center,

over on Pellicer, if you drive over there on, it's kind of also

Old Dixie Highway area by the Oyster Creek. So it's kind of a hidden little pocket over there. You don't know what's really there. Lots of cool stuff there. DARLENE: No, but go and meet them and volunteer.

MELISSA: And when Archaeology Month, we're going to do, well I guess we've already had Archaeology Month. But I think we're going to try to do tours of that facility during City Government Week this year.

So we can get some more public visibility of the cool stuff.

DARLENE: It's fascinating. MELISSA: Yeah. Really cool what they do there. Our next place is Ketterlinus Elementary School. Tell us about Miss Ketterlinus. DARLENE: So, Elizabeth Ketterlinus, known as Lizzy. She was the last of the original Warden family to occupy the Castle Warden. If you don't know what Castle

Warden is, just go visit Ripley's Museum and you'll be standing inside of it.

So she was a landowner in the 1900s. Had a big heart for her community and a desire to always make it better. So, she donated the land on the, excuse me, the corner of Mulvey and Orange Street to the St Johns County School District, and for their, that's where their district offices are located.

The piece of property next to that's quite large. She originally was going to sell it to a land developer and built to build homes, small homes. And as luck would have it, they went belly up. And so she connected with the City and sold it to the City for a bargain price, and that is now known as Francis Field. MELISSA: So, we coulda had condos there. What is with these women in the late 1800s,

1900s. They were entrepreneurs. DARLENE: They knew what they were doing. MELISSA: Boy, good thing she didn't get her way.

Man, we'd really be in trouble.

DARLENE: Exactly. So, I'd much rather have the events, Visitor Information Center, and that beautiful events field, and SWING park. MELISSA: Right. All of that's. And of course, the school district offices are still there. And then of course, Ketterlinus. Yes. School itself.

DARLENE: So, it was originally a high school that caught fire and, you know, changed over time because of that. And now it's, went from a high school to a junior high school. I attended junior high school there. And now it's an elementary school. MELISSA: So, it stayed in the education realm. And remained filled here. DARLENE: Fulfilled her destiny.

MELISSA: Wonderful. That's fantastic.

And so, we're almost out of time.

But I would say that no Women's History in St Augustine would be complete without talking about Miss Carrie

Johnson. DARLENE: The voice, and I call the heart, of Lincolntonville. I think whenever you hear the name Carrie Johnson, you immediately see her riding down the sidewalk on her tricycle waving and hollering, hey darlin'.

You know, she just was the fabric of everything community. She did a lot of volunteering during her life. She also created the annual Christmas caroling galore and she started that in 1995, I believe. And that was just a tradition that I think a lot of families really enjoyed, you know, caroling with her. MELISSA: Before she passed away, I remember. I never knew her in her, in her healthy years, in her heyday, in her healthy years. But we did arrange with her, for her, with

Chief Fox, when Chief Fox was still Police Chief, before she passed away they did a trolley ride for her, and her family, yes, and they sang. And people showed up in droves. In the plaza. DARLENE: Oh she was, they call her the voice of Lincolnville, but I think she's really the heart of the City. She also established a foundation for homeless students and certainly the Lincolnville 150th Anniversary Celebration. She was a founding member of the Anniversary to Commemorate the Civil Rights. And also with what's currently known as the Accord Museum. She was Vice President of Fort Mose

Historical Society. And we remember her forever because we dedicated a street in her name.

It was Bravo Street. She lived on that that street, and the dedication ceremony in 2021 was probably one the most memorable dedications I've attended. You know, her family was there and they sang for her and... MELISSA: They did. They sang some gospel songs and. It was very moving. DARLENE: It was extremely. I mean. MELISSA: David Nolan spoke.

DARLENE: Yeah, it was beautiful. MELISSA: Yeah, that was great. So, lots of history here. DARLENE: I think, what I love about doing this series is whenever you think about the city, you hear about Pedro Menendez. You hear about Henry Flager. You hear about a lot of these men. You don't really think at how many women were responsible for creating exactly what the fabric of St Augustine is. It's the the education, the neighborhoods. MELISSA: I was to say that small neighborhood community feel. Giving back to the community. DARLENE: S we thank these women for dedicating themselves to the City and creating who we are.

MELISSA: And thank you for coming and helping us recap all of that.

DARLENE: Thank you. MELISSA: It's a great visit.

Great conversation and we'll have you back. Come back and see us. DARLENE: Okay. Certainly. MELISSA: If you
